CONVICT LABOR SYSTEM SPREADS

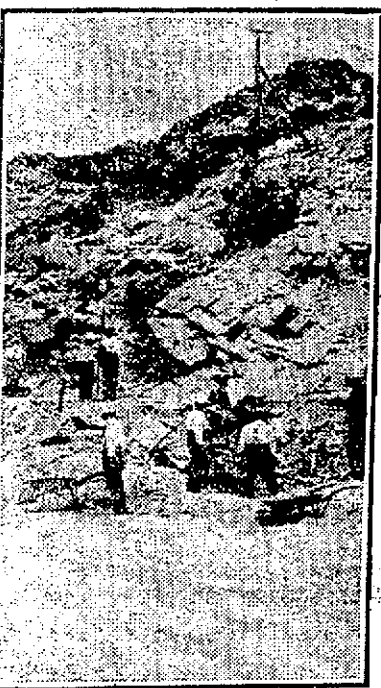

Road Work Is Well Done and Prisoners Improved.

HONOR CAMPS IN VOGUE

Experiment of Employing Convicts on Highways Has Proved a Success in Many States Both as Regards Work Done and For Moral Effect Upon Prisoners.

A few years ago the use of convict labor for road building was confined almost exclusively to a few of the southern states where, it is safe to say, the use of this labor was planned with the intention of securing highway improvements at little or no more cost than was necessary for the housing and feeding of the prisoners in the prisons, says George D. Steele in the Engineering Record. In these early cases the gang system was generally used, the men working in stripes, usually in chains and under guards who were heavily armed. But state after state has taken up the utilization of convict labor in recent years, until it is now common in all sections of the country. With the growth of the use of this class of labor conditions from the prisoners' standpoint have improved materially, though there is still room for much more improvement.

In 1916 an experimental camp was established in Fulton county, Ga., where investigations and studies were carried out relative to convict labor. The average population of the camp since it was established, Jan. 10, 1916, has been forty men convicts per day. With but three or four exceptions these have been negro misdeeders or prisoners whose sentences average between seven and eight months and who were secured from the Fulton county prison. The details of the camp consist of a deputy warden, two foremen, one camp clerk and one night watchman, whose only duties so far have been to protect the commissary. The men are all employed under the honor system, no armed guards being permitted at this camp. All the prisoners are clothed in neat brown suits marked with the prisoner's number. There have been no escapes or attempts at escape up to the first of this year, although about 100 different men have been quartered at the camp in the year of its operation. Only three of these have been sent back to the prison or to the chain camps, the only methods of disciplining that are used; two of these were returned for fighting and the third for the general dissatisfaction which he gave and caused.

Prisoners themselves are in favor of working upon the roads, says the national committee on prisons and prison labor and quotes in support of this assertion from the Star-Bulletin, the organ of New York state prisoners, as follows: "Excellent results were gained during the year 1916 in road work and upon the conviction at Comstock. The road gang operating from Sing Sing repaired many of the bad spots in roads of Westchester and about the prison. This work is expected to continue until there will be well over 150 inmates scattered throughout the country as soon as the weather clears. The tentative list of the men who are to be entrusted with this honor has already been made. It will be the means of bringing back strength and energy, as well as good health, to all the inmates working upon the outside.

"No man of all the inmates who went outside last year had a word of fault to find with his treatment. All are anxious to join these camps again. The freedom of movement and the exercise shorten the time yet to do in a wonderful manner. Many states have found road work to be the answer to the prison problem. Colorado and California have rebuilt the better portion of their roads with prison labor, and, besides feeding the inmates with an extra supply of food, it has also led to a lessening of time through provisions made by the farsighted legislators."

PROMOTING HEALTH ON THE FARM

By P. G. HOLDEN.

FARM women spend many hours every day in the house. For this reason every safeguard to health should be installed. Plenty of sunlight and ventilation is necessary to sanitation. These things must be provided if the health of the housekeepers is to be preserved.

There can scarcely be too many windows in any kitchen. A window reaching to the ceiling will perform the double service of letting in light and letting out the hot air as it rises. Small windows above sinks and cupboards improve both lighting and ventilation.

A Dirty Back Yard, Unsanitary, Unhealthy—A Place Where Disease Lurks and Flies Gather.

During cold weather good ventilation may be secured by placing a board, as long as the width of the window, under the lower sash. This arrangement will admit air between the two sashes without causing a draft.

Doors, windows and porches should be screened and care should be taken to see that the screens fit tightly; that they are always in place during the warm season and that the doors are not left ajar or held open. If wire screens cannot be obtained, flies can be kept out by means of cotton mosquito netting tacked over the windows and light door frames.

Strive to keep the home in good condition—clean, orderly, comfortable, sanitary. Endeavor to keep the yard and surrounding ground free of decaying substances, refuse and filth. Not only will this prevent disease, but it will make the home more enjoyable, a better place to live in, a place to which neighbors and friends will be eager to come.

CANNING FACTORY HAS A BIG SEASON

P. Hohenadel Company Puts Up Immense Amount But High Cost of Cans Will Keep Prices Up.

To aid the Food Administrator in the relief of the food situation, to help win the war, this motto is not painted on the walls of the P. Hohenadel Jr. factory, but it is the first impression given when entering this wonderful factory for the conservation of food.

Pile upon pile of canned goods from the floor to the ceiling, through all the buildings, forcibly brings home the fact that we are now in one of the foundations of our country. A foundation upon which the nation and half of the world rests in these perilous times, a foundation upon which "Wilhelm" would gladly build his throne.

Over 2,000,000 cans of canned peas are put on the market from this factory every year. Peas, corn, sauerkraut, everything conservable in edibles is canned here for the American housewife.

This great industry is one of the main stays of the farmers in Rock county, a place where their surplus crops can be disposed of. Not only do the farmers bring their farm products here, but the Hohenadel factory grows about 1,000 acres of peas and corn, which they also can. The early spring green peas which are the epicurean delight of the world over are grown here.

"Kraut," which once was a German "invention" is now the delight of the American household. For it is no longer necessary to cook, simply put it in hot water and "Presto" it is ready for the table. The cabbage is contracted for by the company with the farmers in Rock county. The canned goods are distributed through brokerage houses and then to the consumer. This year the P. Hohenadel factory produced more than 100,000 cases of canned goods, but the high cost of tin cans which have doubled in price and increased cost of labor and wooden boxes will keep the can goods higher than in previous years.

WISCONSIN RAISES 55 MILLION POUNDS OF SMOKES IN YEAR

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milwaukee, Oct. 1.—Few realize that Wisconsin produces nearly 55,000,000 pounds of tobacco annually. Few Wisconsin Sammies realize they are smoking Wisconsin tobacco. There is doubt as to who is most interested in the Badger state tobacco production—the Sammy or the farmer.

Agriculturists are assuming however, that the Sammy at present is the man to be satisfied and efforts are being made to increase the output next season. Tobacco is already abundant on about 10,000 farms in Wisconsin, about 45,000 acres being devoted to culture of the crop.

Producers of the "weed" receive an average price of from 11 to 12 cents a pound for the crop. The average annual value per acre for the last fifteen year period is shown to be $116.16, which brings Wisconsin up to second place in the United States in this respect. Pennsylvania tobacco has averaged $118.22 over the same period.

The varieties cultivated are popularly known as "binder leaf" in the manufacture of cigars. By selection and close attention to details of cultivation, standard types grown have been widely improved.

Points of heaviest production are found in the old settled counties of Dane, Vernon, Rock, Columbia and Crawford, but more northern counties are taking to tobacco raising with satisfactory results. Excellent returns for the future in these districts are promised.

NO DETAILS MISSED IN CARE OF SAMMIES

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

American Field Headquarters, France, Oct. 1.—Stretching back overland to the sea the American line of communication is a constantly swelling artery vital to the life of Sammy training here in the field. Sammy knows he gets 16 ounces of white bread every day but he doesn't know much about where that bread came from. He gets clothing from the quartermaster and his rations from the company mess. If the supply is plentiful and the quality good Sammy doesn't bother his head much about how it was brought to him. But the auxiliary people know.

The bakers know they stood out in the open all day to save room in the ovens from the infantry training fields, to make the bread. They unloaded the big sacks of Minnesota flour from the railroad trucks that run right into the middle of the bakery. And they carefully slashed the loaves right from the middle to let out the gas before putting them into the ovens.

That little slashing operation looks simple, yet it was decided on only after hours of study by the officer in charge who wanted to see that the bread cars, formerly each loaf was slashed four times across the top. When the crusts formed the interstices of these slashes raised up about an inch and the bread began to push forward to the top. The new slash is just as effective in releasing the gas and it saves one-half of the wasted space.

Suppose a grenade goes off prematurely in a practice tent and Sammy's arm is slashed to the bone by a fragment. The surgeon at the hospital bandages the wound with antiseptics, binds it with a special kind of bandage and puts the patient to bed in a comfortable hospital cot.

Sammy thinks of his own tough luck in being wounded but takes it as a matter of course that all medical paraphernalia is right on hand all these miles from home. Day by day that line of communication is growing, shooting out new spurs to supply the branches of the trail. The bases are being laid beyond their original dimensions, but even today the whole system is only in its infancy.

Gen. Pershing and his staff have visualized a vast enterprise which has to be on an auxiliary business basis in order to feed and clothe the great army that will be here in France when we go into the trenches. Shells will come up along these lines and be pushed forward to the guns and the thousand and one kinds of supplies and equipment that a great army constantly needs must be kept moving in undiminished quantity.

Evansville, Oct. 1.—The dancing party arranged for Wednesday evening next under the auspices of the knitting department of the Red Cross, has been canceled. This party was to be given principally for the raising of money for the knitting department, of which they are sadly in need for the purchasing of yarns for knitting. But three churches, the Methodist, Baptist and Congregational, have let the money be earned in this way, turned their Sunday collections over to the knitting department. This sum, amounting to $67, was given to the society. In view of this the dancing party has been called off.

The celebration given Saturday afternoon and evening by the Milk Producers' association was a very successful event and the association feels repaid for its efforts. The barbecue lunch given at Leonard Park at noon was keenly enjoyed. The speeches given by Capt. Davis of Chicago and John L. Fisher of Janesville, were also much enjoyed. The hall came attracted quite a crowd to the fair grounds, but the weather that afternoon was not very favorable for a ball game for it kept growing colder. The pavement dance in the evening was greatly enjoyed by the young people, and by the large crowd of spectators watching them. The association promises annual celebration and they will be looked forward to with pleasure.

THE LIBERTY LOAN.

Today starts the second call upon the citizens of the United States for subscription to the Liberty loan needed to carry on the plan of the federal government. That they may be successful is the hope of every loyal citizen. It means the blood and sinews of this nation's struggle to maintain the equality of man throughout the world in the face of the great Prussian idea of domination.

In Rock county we must raise much money that has been allotted to us by the men in charge of the federal reserve and in order to do this we must understand what the loan stands for and how the money raised is to be expended. Secretary McAdoo today makes public the following statement which may explain matters materially.

For the purpose of equipping with arms, clothing and food our gallant soldiers who have been called to the field, and to maintain our navy and our valiant troops upon the high seas; providing the necessary means to pay the wages of our soldiers and sailors and, if the bill now pending in the congress passes, the monthly allowances for the support of their dependent families and to supply them with life insurance.

constructing a great fleet of merchant vessels to maintain the line of communication with our brave troops in France, and to keep our commerce afloat upon the high seas in defiance of the German Kaiser and his submarines; creating a great fleet of aeroplanes, which will give complete supremacy in the air to the United States and the brave nations fighting with us against the German military men; and for other necessary war purposes.

The congress of the United States has authorized the secretary of the treasury to sell to the American people bonds of the United States bearing four per cent interest, with valuable tax exemptions, and convertible under certain conditions into other issues of United States bonds that may be authorized by the congress. The official circular of the treasury department gives full details.

There is now offered to the American people a new issue of $3,000,000,000 of bonds to be known as the Liberty Loan. They will be issued in such denominations and upon such terms that an opportunity citizen will have an opportunity to assist the government by lending his money upon the security of a United States government bond.

It is essential to the success of the war and to the support of our gallant troops that these loans shall not only be subscribed, but over-subscribed. No one is asked to donate, but every one is asked to lend his money to the government. The loans will be repaid in full with interest at the rate of four per cent annum. A government bond is the safest investment in the world; it is as good as currency and yet better, because the government bond bears interest and currency does not. No other investment compares with it for safety, ready convertibility into cash, and unquestioned availability as collateral security for loans in any bank in the United States.

People by thousands ask the treasury constantly how they can help the government in this war. Through the purchase of Liberty bonds every one can help. No more patriotic duty can be performed by those who cannot actually fight upon the field of battle than to furnish the government with the necessary money to enable it to give our brave soldiers and sailors all that they require to make them strong for the fight and capable of winning a swift victory over our enemies.

We fight, first of all, for America's vital rights, the right to the untested and unobstructed use of the high seas, so that the surplus products of our farms, our mines and our factories may be carried into the harbors of every friendly nation in the world. Our welfare and prosperity as a people depend upon our right of peaceful intercourse with all the nations of the earth. To abandon these rights by withdrawing our ships and commerce from the seas upon the order of a military despot in Europe would destroy our prosperity and bring disaster and humiliation upon the American people.

We fight to protect our citizens against assassination and murder upon the high seas while in the peaceful exercise of those rights demanded by international law and every instinct and dictate of humanity.

We fight to preserve our democratic institutions and our way of life against the menace of a ruthless military autocracy headed by the German Kaiser, whose ambition is to dominate the world.

We fight also for the noble ideal of universal democracy and liberty, the right of the smallest and weakest nations equally with the most powerful to live and to govern themselves according to the will of their own people.

We fight for peace, for that just and lasting peace which agonized and tortured humanity craves and which not the sword nor the bayonet of a military despot but the supremacy of vindicated right alone can restore to a distracted world.

To secure these ends I appeal to every man and woman who resides upon the soil of free America and enjoys the blessings of her priceless institutions to join the League of Patriots by purchasing a Liberty bond.

LA FOLLETTE OR?

The United States senate now has the opportunity to purge itself of the disgrace of having in its midst an associate whose utterances and actions are such that they are so far over the borderline between the traitorous and the absolute enemy to this nation that the distinction is hard to discriminate.

has seen fit to call attention to the fact that Wisconsin has harbored under the guise of congressmen and one United States senator, disloyal citizens. Let them now be as strenuous in their criticism of their own representatives in the United States senate if they do not take action upon the complaint already filed. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

Minnesota happened to be the scene of this latest fiasco of La Follette when he is alleged to have made his statements that are against good judgment, against the government and otherwise construed to give aid to the enemy. Minnesota placed the complaint in the hands of its United States senator and he has filed it. Now let the other states who have criticized Wisconsin see that these complaints are probed and action taken. If not, they are represented by as derelict representatives as Wisconsin.

No one expects the senate of the United States will actually expel Robert M. La Follette any more than they will expel "Gum Shoe Bill" Stone or Gronna or Gore of Oklahoma or any other of the "Willful Twelve." There is a "heap big smoke but da—little fire" when it comes to those senators taking any action. They talk big but when it comes to actually doing something of this kind they are as afraid of the future as a child is of the dark after being told ghost stories at an hour before bedtime.

However, the die has been cast and it is now worth while waiting and watching just as we did on the Mexican situation, to see what is going to happen. It is a safe bet to make that La Follette will remain until the end of his term in the senate and continue to obstruct legislation and continue to make his studied addresses that just escape the line of treachery and reap a harvest of golden coins on the chautauque circuits in consequence. Meanwhile Wisconsin remains the subject of conversation as a community of anti-government sympathizers. Our anti-administration pro-German congressmen will seek re-election, be named again and things will continue as in the past.

Talk of a political revolution is absolutely absurd. The average voter has his bond servitude so firmly clasped about his neck that no fire on earth could break it. You may talk of reformation, non-partisan politics and so forth, but if—mind you, if—La Follette should be ousted from the United States senate and come back to this state, ask for endorsement for governor, he would swing all his former followers into line as one man and be elected and then he could laugh at the federal government. The same is true of our present congressmen. Figure it out as you wish.

There is nothing like plain truths told you no matter whether you wish to believe otherwise. Wisconsin is a loyal state, but the trouble with its citizens is that they do not know where loyalty to the government and loyalty to their ideal ends and starts. Now that the United States senate has the case in hand let us see how they will solve it. It relieves a lot of responsibility from the shoulders of the loyal citizens of Wisconsin this action of bringing the charges home to roost.

PRICE OF BREAD.
Mr. Hoover does well to tell the people that the price of bread will depend very much on whether the public will take the necessary pains to avoid needless costs of distribution. If people are going to send a hurry call to the grocery or bakery by telephone every time they want a loaf of bread for dinner, requiring the grocer to go out of his way to deliver it, then bread will come down from its present prices very little.

Apparently at the prices now fixed for flour, the price of bread will be reduced if such costs can be cut out. There is a chance here for stores to advertise that they will give the lowest rate to people who will come and carry the goods home and pay cash. Bread is not heavy, and there is no excuse for making grocers travel all over a town delivering it. People can pick it up on the way home as they do other errands. If people pay too much, it is simply that they have created a needlessly costly delivery and charge system that affects all commodities.

IN SOUTHLAND.

Rock county's contingent of soldiers are now in the south, at Waco, Texas. They are no longer Company M. L. A. B. C. E. F. G. H. I. of any Wisconsin contingent, but have a number in the federal army, federal brigade, federal division and are preparing for their service across the sea. We said good-bye to them a week ago today and we gave the whole regiment a royal send-off. Not only our own boys, but the boys of every city and village of the community. Many are working hard to win their spurs across the water, and know them as we do, we are all certain they will be counted among those present needed and acquit themselves as soldiers and gentlemen under all conditions.

DOLLAR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Mayor Fathers in an address to the general public calls attention to the need of five hundred dollars to the fund for the establishment of libraries in all the cantonments and soldiers' camps in this and any foreign country the stars and stripes may fly over. Five hundred dollars in the aggregate is not a great sum and one dollar from every citizen so inclined would swell the total far above the figure needed. Be ready to respond and prompt to sign up. The campaign is on now.

Just Folks

THE FLAG
We never knew how much the Flag Could mean, until he went away, We used to boast of it and brag, So something of a by-gone day, But now the Flag can start our tears In moments of our greatest joy, Oh glory in the sky is high, The symbol of our little boy.

We knew that sometimes people wept To see the Flag go waving by, We never guessed the grief he kept, We never understood just why, But now our eyes grow quickly dim, Our voices choke with sobs today, The Flag is telling us of him, Our little boy who's gone away.

We never knew the Flag could be So much a part of human life, We thought it beautiful to see, But now these bitter days of strife, But now more beautiful than gold, And deeper in our heart it dwells, It is the emblem of our dreams, For of our little boy it tells.

ALL LINERS MUST PUT ON WAR ARMOR

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Washington, Oct. 1.—Beginning tomorrow every vessel leaving the United States for European and Mediterranean ports will have to obey treasury department regulations relative to armament, armor and armor plating, and paintings to obtain invisibility which have been adopted as part of the plans of this country and the allies for dealing with the German submarine menace.

The vessels must be armed in accordance with the recommendations of the navy department. The charge of war risk insurance will be an additional rate of 1 per cent on each voyage of vessels failing to comply with this requirement.

Each vessel must be painted in accordance with one of the systems that are recommended by the ship protection committee of the emergency fleet corporation. Ship owners are free to select any one of the approved methods of painting their vessels but must first be submitted to and receive the approval of the chairman of the naval consulting board.

Each steamer at line of sailing from the United States must carry a sufficient supply of approved smokeless fuel to carry her for not less than two daylight periods, this coal to be used during the daylight runs while within the submarine zone. Steamers equipped with an improved system whereby the vessel may be operated without the emission of visible smoke from her stacks are relieved from the above requirement.

All vessels must carry on deck one dozen approved smoke boxes, which will evolve smoke when thrown overboard, thereby increasing the vessel's chance of escaping behind the wall of smoke.

The war risk insurance bureau reserves the right to decline to insure vessels whose owners have not, in the opinion of the bureau, made a satisfactory effort to comply with these requirements.

DENVER MINT WORKING SIXTEEN HOURS A DAY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Denver, Colo., Oct. 1.—The Denver mint supplying the sub-treasuries at St. Louis, Chicago and New Orleans, is working two shifts of eight hours each these days, in an effort to double its normal output of silver coins. This plan is the result of orders from Washington to meet an unprecedented demand for silver coins, due to the influence of the war on financial markets and to heavy fall crop movements.

The local mint last year turned out 1,014,900 half dollars, 3,270,000 quarters, 264,000 dimes and 35,955,900 pennies.

MITCHELL TO FIGHT FOR RE-ELECTION

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
New York, October 1.—A four cornered contest for Mayor was assured today when it became virtually certain that Mayor Mitchell would make a fight for re-election despite his defeat by Wm. Bennett, a former senator, in the republican nomination. Leaders in the fusion movement which was responsible for the Mayor's election four years ago began today to make arrangements for a campaign for his re-election. Already petitions are in circulation to place Mayor Mitchell's name on the official ballot.

AVERSION OF SHIP STRIKE MEANS MUCH

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Chicago, Oct. 1.—The agreement reached in Washington which checked a threatened strike of 100,000 seamen on the great lakes was declared today to have averted a serious tie up of several industries here. With an effective stopping of the ore-carrying vessels the South Chicago and Gary, Indiana, steel mills probably would have been forced to close down in midwinter. Transportation of wheat would also have been affected according to Joseph P. Griffin, president of the Chicago Board of Trade. He says that the tieing up of grain ships would have had a serious effect on the exportation of Canadian wheat to the allies and spring wheat from Duluth.

CARD INDEX OF ALL AMERICAN SOLDIERS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Washington, Oct. 1.—A card index of all American officers and soldiers at home and abroad is to be compiled by the war department. Congress has appropriated money for the purpose in the general deficiency bill. Every man will be indexed by name and the records filed in an alphabetical order for immediate reference should he appear in army orders and casualty list. With the description of each soldier will be given an "emergency address."

The plan of giving each number virtually has been abandoned and it is understood that each soldier will be supplied with a small aluminum tag bearing his name and company to be worn around his neck. Plans have been completed for the creation of a "Statistical division" with a branch in Paris to compile records.

PETEY DINK—HE SHOULD HAVE HAD A BIG APPETITE BY THIS TIME.

Authorship Long Hidden.
The Waverley novels were so called because the first of the series was called Waverley. It was published anonymously in 1814, and was followed, year after year, by other novels published anonymously until 1827, when at a public dinner party Scott admitted the authorship.

Bricks in Biblical Times.
The Jews learned the art of brick making in Egypt. We find the use of the brick kiln in David's time (11 Sam. 12:31). A complaint is made by Isaiah that the people built altars of brick instead of unhewn stone as the law directed (Isaiah 1:33; Exodus 20:25).

Beyond the Frontier

A Romance of Early Days in the Middle West

Author of "Keith of the Border," "My Lady of Doubt," "The Maid of the Forest," etc.

Cassion laughed, chucking the gloomy faced Chevet in the side, as though he would give point to a good joke.

"And little the trip hither has profited either master or man. I warrant, La Barre does not sell New France to every adventurer. Monsieur de la Salle found different reception in Quebec than when Frontenac ruled this colony. Where went the fur stealer?"

"To whom do you refer?"

"To whom? Heaven helps us, Chevet, the man would play nice with words. Well, let it go, my young cock, and answer me."

"You mean the Sieur de la Salle?"

"To be sure; I called him no worse than I have heard La Barre speak. They say he has left Quebec; what more know you?"

"'Tis no secret, monsieur," replied D'Artigny quietly enough, although there was a dash in his eyes, as they met mine. "The Sieur de la Salle has sailed for France."

"France? Bah you jest; there has been no ship outward bound."

"The Breton passed at St. Roch, held by the fog. When the fog lifted there was a new passenger aboard. By dawn the Indian paddlers had me landed in Quebec."

"Does La Barre know?"

"Faith! I could not tell you that, as he has not honored me with audience."

Cassion strode back and forth, his face dark with passion. It was not pleasant news he had been told, and it was plain enough he understood the meaning.

"By the saints!" he exclaimed. "'Tis a sly fox to break through our guard so easily. Ay, and 'twill give him a mouth to whisper his lies to Louis, before La Barre can forward a report. But, sacre! my young chancier, surely you are not here to bring me this bit of news. You sought me, you said? Well, for what purpose?"

"In peace, monsieur. Because I have served Sieur de la Salle loyally is no reason why we should be enemies. We are both the king's men, and may work together. The word has come to me that you head a party for the Illinois, with instructions for De Baugis at Fort St. Louis. Is this true?"

Cassion howled coldly, waiting to discover how much more his questioner knew.

"Ah, then I am right thus far. Well, monsieur, 'twas on that account I came, to volunteer as guide."

"You! 'Twould be treachery."

"Oh, no; our interests are the same so far as the journey goes. I would reach St. Louis; so would you. Because we may have different ends in view, different causes to serve, has naught to do with the trail thither. There is not a man who knows the way as well as I. Four times have I traveled it, and I am not a savage, monsieur—I am a gentleman of France."

"And you pledge your word?"

"I pledge my word—to guide you safe to Fort St. Louis. Once there I am comrade to Sieur de la Salle."

"Bah! I care not whom you comrade with, once you serve my purpose. I take your offer, and if you play me false—"

"Restrain your threats, Monsieur Cassion. A quarrel will get us nowhere. You have my word of honor; 'tis enough. Who will compose the party?"

Cassion hesitated, yet seemed to realize the uselessness of deceit.

"A dozen or more soldiers of the regiment of Picardy, some couriers du bois, and the Indian paddlers. There will be four boats."

"You go by the Ottawa, and the lakes?"

"Such were my orders."

"'Tis less fatiguing, although a longer journey; and the time of departure?"

Cassion laughed as he turned slightly and bowed to me.

"We leave Quebec before dawn Tuesday," he said gayly. "It is my wish to enjoy once more the follies of civilization before plunging into the wilderness. The governor permits that we remain to his ball. Mademoiselle de Chesapeake does me the honor of being my guest on that occasion."

"I, monsieur!" I exclaimed in surprise at his boastful words. "'Twas my uncle who proposed—"

"But, what of that?" he interrupted in no way discomposed. "It is my request which opens the golden gates. The good Hugo here but looks on at a frivolity for which he cares nothing. 'Tis the young who dance."

"Cassion is Not Likely to Be Caught Asleep, My Good Hugo."

And you, Monsieur d'Artigny, am I to meet you there also, or perchance later at the boat landing?"

"At the ball, monsieur. 'Tis three years since I have danced to measure, but it will be a joy to look on, and thus keep company with Monsieur Chevet. Nor shall I fall out at the boats: until then, messieurs," and he bowed him in hand, "and to you, mademoiselle, adieu."

We watched him go down the grape arbor to the canoe, and no one spoke but Cassion.

"Pouf! he thinks well of himself, that young cockerel, and 'twill likely be my part to clip his spurs. Still 'tis good policy to have him with us, for 'tis a long journey. What say you, Chevet?"

"That he is one to watch," answered my uncle gruffly. "I trust none of La Salle's brood."

"No, nor I, for the matter of that, but I am willing to pit my brains against the best of them. Francois Cassion is not likely to be caught asleep, my good Hugo."

CHAPTER II.

The Choice of a Husband.
It was just before dark when Monsieur Cassion left us, and I watched him go gladly enough, hidden behind the shade of my window. He had been talking for an hour with Chevet in the room below; I could hear the rattle of glasses, as though they drank, and the unpleasant arrogance of his voice, although no words reached me clearly. I cared little what he said, although I wondered at his purpose in being there, and what object he might have in this long converse with my uncle. Yet I was not sent for, and no doubt it was some conference over furs, of no great interest. The two were in some scheme I knew to gain advantage over Sieur de la Salle, and were much elated now that La Barre held power; but that was nothing for a girl to understand, so I worked on with busy fingers, my mind not forgetful of the young Sieur d'Artigny.

Chevet did not return to the house after Monsieur Cassion's canoe had disappeared. I saw him walking back and forth along the river bank, smoking, and seemingly thinking out some problem. Nor did he appear until I had the evening meal ready, and called to him down the arbor. He was always gruff and bearish enough when we were alone, seldom speaking, indeed, except to give utterance to some order, but this night he appeared even more morose and silent than his wont, not so much as looking at me as he took seat, and began to eat. No doubt Cassion had brought ill news, or else the appearance of D'Artigny had served to arouse all his old animosity toward La Salle. It was little to me, however, and I had learned to ignore his moods, so I took my own place silently, and paid no heed to the scowl with which he surveyed me across the table. No doubt my very indifference fanned his discontent, but I remained ignorant of it until he burst out savagely.

"And so you know this young cockerel, do you? You know him, and never told me? Where before did you ever meet this popinjay?"

"At the convent three years ago, La Salle rested there over night, and young D'Artigny was of the party. He was but a boy then."

"He came here today to see you?"

"No, never," I protested. "I doubt if he even had the memory of me until I told him who I was. Surely he explained clearly why he came."

He eyed me fiercely, his face full of suspicion, his great hand gripping the knife.

"'Tis well for you if that be true," he said gruffly, "but I have no faith in the lad's words. He is here as La Salle's spy, and so I told Cassion, though the only honor he did me was to laugh at my warning. 'Let him spy,' he said, 'and I will play at the same game; 'tis little enough he will learn, and we shall need his guidance. Ay! and he may be right, but I want nothing to do with the fellow. Cassion may give him place in his boats, if he will, but never again shall he set foot on my land, nor have speech with you. You mark my words, mademoiselle?'"

I felt the color flame into my cheeks, and knew my eyes darkened with anger, yet made effort to control my speech.

"Yes, monsieur; I am your ward and have always been obedient, yet this Sieur d'Artigny seems a pleasant spoken young man, and surely 'tis no crime that he serves the Sieur de la Salle."

"Is it not?" he burst forth, striking the table with his fist. "Know you not I would be rich but for that fur stealer. By right those should be my furs he sends here in trade. There will be another tale to tell soon, now that La Barre hath the reins of power; and this D'Artigny—bah! What care I for that young cockerel—but I hate the brood. Listen, girl, I pay my debts; it was this hand that broke Louis d'Artigny, and has kept him to his bed for ten years past. Yet even that does not wipe out the score between us. 'Tis no odds to you what was the cause, but while I live I hate. So you have my orders; you will speak no more with this D'Artigny."

"Yes, monsieur."

"Oh, you're sweet enough with words. I have heard you before, and found you a sly minx—when my back was turned—but this time it is not I alone who will watch your actions, I have pledged you a husband."

I got to my feet, staring at him, the indignant words stifled in my throat. He laughed coarsely, and resumed his meal.

"A husband, monsieur? You have pledged me?"

"Ay! why not? You are 17, and 'tis my place to see you well settled."

"But I have no wish to marry, monsieur," I protested. "There is no man for whom I care."

He shrugged his shoulders indifferently, and laughed.

"Pouh! if I waited for that no doubt you would pick out some cockerel without as much as a spur to his heel. 'Tis my choice, not yours, for I know the world, and the man you need. Monsieur Cassion has asked me to favor him, and I think well of it."

"Cassion! Surely you would not wed me to that creature?"

He pushed back his chair, regarding me with scowling eyes.

"And where is there a better? Sacre! do you think yourself a queen to choose? 'Tis rare luck you have such an offer. Monsieur Cassion is going to be a great man in this New France; already he has the governor's ear, and a commission, with a tidy sum to his credit in Quebec. What more could any girl desire in a husband?"

"But, monsieur, I do not love him; I do not trust the man."

Dinner Stories

Tommy's mother had left him to entertain. Tommy, his young brother, while she went out to do an hour's shopping. When she returned Tommy was on hand with an important question:

"Doesn't the boys about Johnny's size, mamma, have hair on the inside of them?"

"Of course they don't," she exclaimed. "Why do you ask that?"

"Oh, nothing," he said, starting off. "Only I've wasted a bottle of hair oil in Johnny."

Thomas Edison is an inveterate smoker. Some little time ago he complained to his tobacco dealer of the rapidity with which his cigars disappeared and could not believe he smoked them all himself.

The dealer agreed to make some "fake" cigars. "I'll fill 'em with horsehair and rubber," said he.

Several weeks later Mr. Edison saw the tobacco dealer again and said: "Look here! I thought you were going to fix me up some faked cigars?"

"Why, I did!" exclaimed the other, in hurt surprise. "Don't you remember the box with a green label—cigars tied with yellow ribbon?"

Edison smiled reflectively. "I smoked those cigars myself," he said.

Billy Sunday told a story at a Brooklyn luncheon about an apathetic Missourian confectioner.

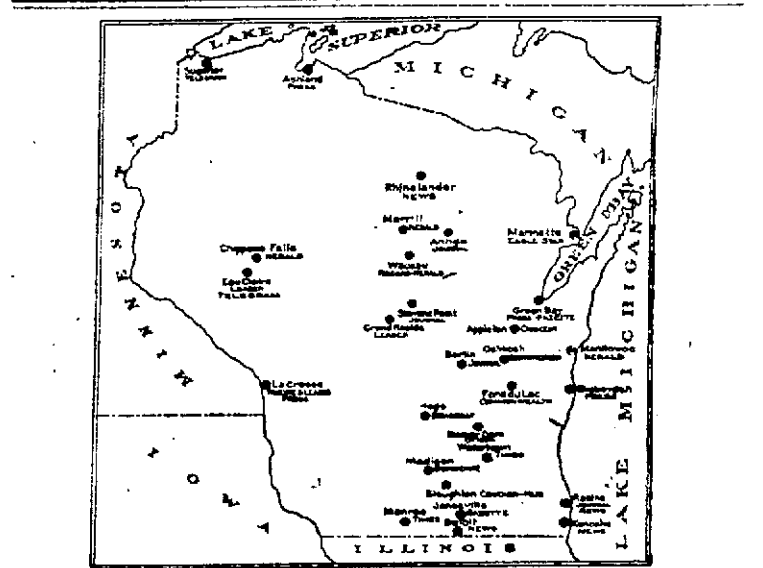

"This bunch's preacher," he said, "has wrestled among 'em for thirty-seven years, and never an encouraging word but one has he got in all that time."

"He told me about it with tears in his eyes," he said he was on the way home to dinner when a deacon hailed him. The deacon shook him by the hand and then actually said:

"Ah, parson, that was a beautiful text you preached from Sunday evening."

The average married man doesn't realize what he is missing unless he counts the change in his pockets night and morning.

Hard Hitting and Good Fielding Features Both of the Games—Cards Have a Strong Line-up.

Jamestown lost the first two games of the All-Catholic series with the Beloit Charbonnet-Morse team at Beloit, Saturday and Sunday. Both games were closely fought throughout and were by no means one-sided affairs, but in the end the Beloit team was the victor in both. The first game on Saturday at the Beloit fair grounds went ten innings before it was decided. The score was 4 to 3 in favor of the Beloit team. In the second game on Sunday, the Beloit team was again the victor, being scored as the result of an overthrow to third base. The second game ended 4 to 3 in favor of the Fairies.

Both of the games were well played and few errors being made by either team. Jamestown was represented by the best team which has been on the field during the season. The Fairies and the Beloit team were the only teams with the addition of two strong pitchers secured for the season.

Spald was on the mound for the first inning of the trial game and held the home batsmen at his mercy throughout. He was opposed by Kemman, who was also in superb form, resulting in a pitchers' duel. The sixth frame was a tie, but Spald's sixth frame was better. The game was won in the tenth inning by an overthrow to third base in an effort to catch a runner. Thereafter, he added the hands of Aron and the rest of the crowd, which was crowded near the baseline. The umpire allowed the runner to complete the circuit with the winning run. The team of the regulars consisted of several veteran players, onto the field and they showed some real baseball. The debut team was not graceful. The debut game was not a success. One of their games was in their class in this respect at the country. They were playing in their best form but the Carls were on the job at all times. The batting of Jennings was a main feature of the game. The feature of the first game.

The game on Sunday was played at the fair grounds, where the Winnie-Goose fair was in progress, as the additional attraction to the horse races which were held there. The game was played in spite of the rather conditions. The number of fans who were not as large as the Sunday crowd, but the Cards were victorious.

Schorp, a former Cincinnati twirler, was sent to the mound by manager Brandon on Sunday in the first inning of the series. A century in the second contest would have given the locals a chance of tying the series and had the Cards not had the opportunity of winning the series of games.

"Doc" Zabel, a former Chicago Coss man, who has been with the Fairies during the present season, was on the slab for Bolo, and he showed a classy article of bull. He was given no support, however, and it was only his excellent work on the slab that saved him from defeat. The Cards made eight hits off Zabel, and he was out of the game as the Fairies hatched off the delivery of Schomp, but, on the other hand, however, was credited with four errors while the Janesville team made only one. Janesville's lead was held until the one tally until a rally by the Fairies the lead. Janesville came back strong and led the count at that the teams entered the ninth frame with the score knotted at the two runs. Janesville then took the lead, but the Fairies came to bat and knocked out the winning tally. Brockbridge, first up for the Fairies, drove out a hit to right field. Roberts started after the ball, attempted to make a sliding catch and failed. The ball, however, got through him and went as a three-base hit. The ball, it fielded perfectly, could have been only a single. The coach came up to bat and drove out a hit. Brockbridge drove out a hit, changing the game for the Fairies.

The game on Sunday was well attended by both Beloit and Janesville fans. The weather was somewhat cold for the playing of the game, but a spite of this handicap the fans were on hand to cheer the teams on to victory. The Cards had a goodly number of fans with them who made a trip to witness the games.

Next Saturday and Sunday the third and fourth games of the series will be played at Brieft on the Fairbanks baseball field. Arrangements have been completed so that the results of the world's series came between the Chicago Sox and the New York Giants, which will be played in Chicago on Saturday, will be received, play by play. A special wire has been leased and the game will be announced to the fans as it progresses.

The line-ups for the games were as follows:

Beloit Entries: Thomas, lf.; Brennan, 2b.; Baxter, rf.; Perring, cf.; Lewis, 1b.; Breckenridge, c.; French, 3b.; Shook, ss.; Zabel and Keuman, p. and hard hats.

Keopping, ss.; Aron, 3b.; Swart, lf.; Hauger, cf.; Eberts, rf.; Ross, 1b.; Matthews, 2b.; Murphy, 3b.; Seid and Schoup, p.

Truth may be stranger than fiction.
It is up to travel faster.

The transfer of Buck Weaver back to his old position as shortstop in the Sox lineup, with McMullin at third base, simply adds to the pre-eminence the Chicago team enjoys over the Cleveland Indians. Weaver, at shortstop, the Sox topped the Giants at second base, were overshadowed at shortstop by the Indians. The Sox have now stood off at third. Now the Sox have an advantage at second base and shortstop. It is probable that the Sox and Indians are going to play only at third base, where it is considered by most persons that Irlie Zimmerman's experience and hitting ability makes him far above the Cleveland outfield.

McMullin may hold his own as a elder with Zimmerman, although Zimmerman has the edge in the outfield. Zimmerman can handle bunts and slowly hit rounders as Zimmerman can. It is certain death at first base to drive the ball in front of Zimmerman. Zimmerman has the art of scooping up a rounder with his bare hand reduced to a science, and the strength in his arm makes it almost certain he will hit the ball.

McMullin can't do that. Kind of playing—yet. But, on the other hand, he has been men of just that type who have shown to the world's tremendous audience the tremendous possibilities of the world's series contests. In the quartet of games the White Sox won from the Cubs back in 1906 he was youthful George Robe who nabbed at third base and was the hero of the series.

He is a natural shortstop—the greatest in the game just now. He and Roger Peckinpaugh of the Yankees simply eclipse other short-players now doing duty. Fleckner, though a brilliant hitter, and remarkable for his speed, could cover the ground or work with the speed of a weaver. The transfer gives the Sox strength where most critics were inclined to think they would be weak. It was lucky that John F. Dowd decided to switch his lineup and re-sign McMullin at third base.

New York, Oct. 1.—The biggest financial coup of the baseball season will be distributed soon in the form of a division of the gate receipts of a world's series games of 1917. When the New York National and Chicago American league players meet in the latter ward of the month in the form of admission charges by thousands of spectators who will attend the contests, they will be able to deposit in the credit of their bank accounts some larger sum than any amount of many of the fans who will witness the play.

The players will not be the only ones to benefit, however, for the club owners and the national commission so come in for a percentage of the receipts, which are expected to exceed a quarter of a million dollars this season. Under the rules of the league, which have been in effect since the world series since 1903, the division is made in the following manner: The national commission receives 10 per cent of the receipts of each and every game of the season, the club owners; the remaining 90 per cent of the first four games is divided upon basis of two-thirds to the players and one-third to the club owners; and in the fourth game the players cease

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 1.—A war oath taken by three hundred students of Beloit college at the opening of school last week included the following:

"In appreciation of my own enlistment in the year I dedicate my choicest possession my time; and my choicest heritage my physical, mental, and spiritual being to the wisest procedure and activities offered by Beloit college with all of her traditions, association and opportunities.".....

While New York fans are inclined to pool-pool the idea that Cioetto's shine ball will go down like a lead, the fact is that they can't conceal the fact that they are a bit uneasy on the point. When Eddie Cioetto has been able to pool the best American ball batters, such as Cobb and Speaker, it is doubtful most of the season it appears that he should not be troubled with the Giants for a short series. It is the usual experience with tried ball-ers that they go down in a few batters, and when the lads begin to wise up. Nothing of this sort has happened to Cioetto's ball, which persuades many that it is not a trick of the ball, but that the Giants will like this set to be seen.

Another interesting phase of the "shine ball" is the fact that a number of National league twirlers have tried very hard to acquire it, but with little conspicuous success. Some say that Chief Bender managed it and that this accounts for his remarkable rejuvenation. No one else in the National league got the suit and none of the N. L. batters have a very clear idea what it is like. Both Red Russell and Claude Williams, teammates of Chief Bender, have tried to get it up pretty well, however, and this is a bit of news not likely to ciliate Giant batters. With all of this shine ball skill turned on the Giant pitchers, it is not at all surprising that the batters see them occasionally puzzled at bat.

No one knows just exactly what will happen in the big games this season and of course it's possible that the Yankees will never come through with a no-hit game. But it's extremely unlikely. If he does he will have the pleasure of knowing it before. The nearest approach to such a performance in a world's series was in 1906, when Ed Walsh pitched for the Cubs, all but got away with it. He held the White Sox to one hit, a single. Even so, Ed made the game a two-hit affair, which was aided by Jiggs Donabue. There have been no one-hit world's series games pitched since. Ed Walsh pitched a two-hit game for the Cubs in 1908, and so did Plank for the Athletics, James for the Braves and Brown for the Cubs. Three-hit and four-hit world's series games are about as numerous though they are still greatly welcomed.

California hasn't made much of a noise in the boxing game since anti-foreign legislation has been passed. There several years ago, but recently it appears that a revival of boxing is taking place. The present limit and the participants must be members of the club. Four-round fights are now flourishing in the city and it is not too difficult to make to them very well. It also appears to be an easy matter to elect most any boxer to the club for the purpose of receiving a license. The license is now, in the city, for boxing at different times in San Francisco and he is getting from $700 to $1,000 per fight. There is a new wave of native fighters of reasonable class are making a fair wage at it and eastern promoters are now getting into the game. The only trouble is that no license may be taken to the coast to step through four-round bouts and on the whole it seems likely that boxing in California may be over again.

Chief Bender is a great booster for John McGraw and says that the game has been the greatest years the game has been. "He does all the thinking for the team and you can take it from me he's able to do it all. He's as good as a money making machine. McGraw can think and think fast and generally thinks right. Thinking right at the right time means victories and pennants and money and offers the best opportunities. And it's very likely to mean a world championship this season."

Bunny Hearn, a young southpaw turned back by the Giants to Toronto, Larry Lajoie's team, was the star of the staff and a big item in Toronto's pennant winning. At the start of the season he was a big item in the market at $1,000 if he won twenty games and he had his twenty games won before the season was half over. Quite a few league managers would be pleased to meet him.

Dope on the world's series is now the order of the day, as the White Sox and Giants seem almost certain to meet in the big event. World's series are largely pitching competitions and the team with the best twirlers will almost always have the brightest chances. Fielding support and batting are big items, however, and Clarence Rowland will meet the Giants with an array of stars that will make McGraw's million-dollar outfit hustle. American league fans very naturally look to see the White Sox win.

"Hap" Felsch (above) and Benny Kauff.

Although Benny Kauff has been often mentioned lately as a greatly improved ball player and though it is known that he is one of the Giants' best hitters, it is not certain that he has so much on "Hap" Felsch, the White Sox center fielder. The most recent averages show Felsch a bit ahead of Kauff in the batting list and Felsch, though not the most finished fielder in the game, is a bit less erratic fielder than Kauff. At any rate their competition will be watched with interest.
